STAT

A good deal of water has gone under the bridge since we first discussed where your talents would be put to the best advantage and where in turn your education could best be furthered. There have been a number of changes in the situation here. The organization of the Office has been rearranged and the character of the job I originally had in mind for you has altered in such a way that I no longer think you would find it stimulating or profitable.

Walt Rostow at the Center for International Studies has sought my assistance in finding him someone to help out with some research problems he has. As he describes them I must say that what he has in mind for you sounds like something which would make much better use of your special talents than what is left of the job we originally discussed. If you are moved to accept his proposal I cannot but agree with him that you could make a bigger contribution there than here.

I will look forward to seeing you on my next visit to Cambridge.

Sincerely yours,

MF
